Dear Ellis:

Thank you so much for taking time to tour Texas Children's and learn more about the hospital and our transplant program. We are so grateful for the support that the JLH Foundation has provided since 2004 to alleviate the financial burdens our patients' families must face during their medical journey.

As Texas Children's reputation continues to grow, so too does the demand for the specialized services only we can provide. We have one of the largest and most active transplant programs in the country, with our team having recently performed their 1,500th organ transplant.

To meet the growing needs of our patients, Texas Children's continues to expand. We recently opened our second community hospital, Texas Children's Hospital The Woodlands, to serve families in communities north of Houston. Earlier this year, we also celebrated the topping out of the new Legacy Tower at our Texas Medical Center Campus, and we are on track to open the building in 2018. This new facility will expand our critical, surgical and cardiac care services and enable us to expand our reach to care for more children.

With generous support from the JLH Foundation, we are meeting the unique needs of our organ transplant patients and their families, who are the true beneficiaries of your kindness. All of us at Texas Children's value our partnership with you and appreciate your consideration of this request for continued support.

Sincerely,

Matt Giroto
Vice President
